"Some might say it's a quiet show, yet it speaks volumes if you're listening. The slightest gestures, the simplest lines, the faintest glances—they are quite powerful when considered and detected.

There are figures sensitive and fierce, with speculative expressions asking what you're looking for. A sense of apprehension runs through "Contact", as it does in our new daily lives, where friendliness or intimacy can feel dangerous, even between our closest loved ones.

The remarkable pairing of artworks peeks from behind closed doors, beckons our reconciliation with each other and with comfortable contact. It's reaching out, each artist lending a hand, welcoming us to test our physical feelings again. If not face-to-face, then through the relics generated alongside a universal hesitance (and simultaneous longing) to reengage."

- Kristin Farr, artist and writer
